Some of the space problems of the Gabrielli Palace in Piran can be solved by restoring some parts of the museum. The museum became in the 1977 the first Slovene institution that was dedicated to collecting the material cultural heritage, archive material, sistematic research of seamanship and the connected economic activity - like tourism - linked to the sea. The idea is to realize a space for temporary exhibitions, pedagogical activities, a museum library on the ground floor of the museum - the Gabrielli Palace. The renovation of Gabrielli Palace would revitalize the waterfront in its vicinity. The whole project would create a large, tradition related maritime center and would immensly enrich the tourist offer of Piran, the nearby Portoroz, Triest and the whole tourist area. The project partner Maritime Museum of Piran is not the owner of the Gabrielli Palace but disposes with the infrastructure according to the Act of Foundation (Odlok o ustanovitvi/Atto di Fondazion Museum Piran (see attachement). Financial, institutional and political sustainability of the investment after project's end	The maritime museum of Piran has pratically always been a national museum according to its contents and the way of its functioning. The restoring of the Palace will help to improve work conditions and create additional spaces for the museum collections. The formal status of the Maritime Museum as a national museum was not achieved due to insufficient exhibition space. We consider the restruction of the Palace as a perfect chance to solve this main problem.
